

Garfield Symphony Orchestra at Boston Symphony Hall in 2007.
Support these young stewards of the future of classical music.

Director Marcus Tsutakawa received one of four University of Washington College of Arts and Sciences Distinguished Alumni Awards in 2007. In his twenty-two year tenure, the orchestra has grown from 15 members to 175, divided among the Symphony, Concert and Chamber orchestras.

- 2007 - Co-winner of Downbeat Magazine's 30th annual student music awards in the classical group category for high school.
- 2007 - Co-champions at the Boston Festival of Gold.
- First place Northwest Orchestra Festival 14 out of 15 years.
- 2004-2005 Grammy signature school program finalist.

"We not only learned how to become musicians but ultimately to be better citizens...Through music he taught us how to work with other people, to really see how a whole is greater than the sum of its parts, in general how music imitates life." Former Garfield musician, now an orchestra director.

How your tax-deductible gift will help:

Enable Travel

Help the orchestras to travel and perform both in the US and overseas and support international musical exchanges.

Enter Competitions

Send the orchestras to regional and national competitions in the Northwest and major US cities.

Provide Instruments

Support the purchase of new and replacement instruments for the orchestras.

Purchase Musical Scores

Defray this major expense for the orchestras. Help the Garfield orchestras sustain a constantly changing repertoire.

Provide Individual Lessons

Allow private coaching when family finances do not permit this additional support.

Make Recordings

Recordings are used for competition entries, fundraising, gifts to donors and visiting musicians and as keepsakes for student members.

Support classical music and send a tax-deductible contribution to:

Friends of Garfield Orchestra
10715 Seola Beach Drive SW
Seattle, WA 98146

For information on the orchestras, visit www.garfieldorchestra.org